New Incident Reporting System

How to report injuries, near misses and hazards from your phone

Why we're doing this

We're rolling out a simple new way to report anything that goes wrong — or nearly goes wrong — at work. It takes about two minutes from your phone. Reporting quickly keeps everyone safe, helps us fix hazards before someone gets hurt, and it's a legal requirement under the Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (Qld) that we record workplace incidents. The more we report, the safer our brewery, canning line, cold room, dock and taproom become.

What to report

If in doubt, report it. Report any:

- Injury or illness — from a small cut or strain up to anything serious.
- Near miss — something that could have hurt someone but didn't (e.g. a forklift near-miss, a dropped keg).
- Dangerous incident — CO2 or chemical leak, spill, fire, electric shock, equipment failure, fall from height.
- Hazard — anything unsafe you notice: a wet floor, a faulty guard, damaged gear.

How to report — 4 easy steps

- 1 Scan the QR poster with your phone camera (posters are up around site). Tap the link that pops up.
- 2 Fill in the form. Your name and contact, when and where it happened, and what happened. It's quick.
- 3 Add photos. Tap the camera button to snap the scene, equipment or injury — a picture tells us a lot.
- 4 Hit submit. That's it. The report goes straight to the safety team and into our register.

No phone or not sure? Tell your supervisor and they'll log it with you.

What happens after you report

- The safety team is notified straight away and reviews your report.

- We investigate what happened and put corrective actions in place.
- Each report is tracked from open through to closed, so nothing slips through.
- Your report is kept on record for at least 5 years, as the law requires.

In an emergency, act first — report second.

- Life-threatening emergency: call 000 and get help.
- A serious (notifiable) incident — death, hospital admission, amputation, major dangerous incident — must be reported to WorkSafe Qld immediately on 1300 362 128. Tell a manager right away and don't disturb the scene (except to help someone or make it safe). The form will flag these for you.

Talking points for the crew

- What are the main hazards in your area right now?
- Can you think of a recent near miss we should have reported?
- Where are the QR posters in your work area — does everyone know?
- “If in doubt, report it.” No report is too small.
